

share of small businesses, and has supported the sectors most affected by COVID, although there has been some criticism on the estimated high level of losses from the scheme - both from businesses defaulting on loans and fraud.

- 25. Long COVID review. Lord Bethell will publish the NIHR Centre for Engagement and Dissemination's report into 'long-COVID' and the outcome of focus group conversations with patients experiencing the effects. The report details the so-far limited scientific and clinical data, drawing from work undertaken in Italy, the US and the UK. Early indications are that long-term effects include lung fibrosis, myalgia, tachycardia, fatigue, 'brain fog', anxiety and depression. It concludes that more recognition and support is needed for both post-hospitalised and non-hospitalised ongoing COVID patients than is currently provided.

- 28. TV and film support. The Chancellor will announce that a £500 million fund to support the film and TV industries getting back to work is now being rolled out. Around 2,000 TV and film productions are currently paused as they cannot secure insurance for COVID risks. This fund will pay out when losses have been incurred, allowing productions to get their cameras rolling. We are currently looking at options for a studio visit for the Chancellor with a pooled clip.
