ah. that doesn't wholly surprise me. we had similar issue after grenfell. back in the day we used to run things like flooding jointly so that people picking up policy had a chance of actually developing that over a longer time period than an action log from one day to the next. but I don't think i've seen that happen - NR
NR on no deal being a v significant exception.

btw apart from my mini-rant about the masculine tone i have some VIEWS about the way we are treating "science" like it is the word of God. We don't always go where the science leads us...Chris W is exceptional btw so this is not a pop at him but the answer isn't just what is rational.

I think this might be a gap. I am taking a meeting to get the pandemic bill into proper shape. There is an issue here in that CCS tend to see COBR as a cabinet committee which it isn't in policy terms. Will get into it tmw.

Who in your team is supporting CCS on the policy (not emergency) response to the virus?
