Just got to this - did you see my email ? Do we focus on the questions that ministers pose and get data on that ?

Subject: RE: NMC update on number of people on temporary register

Hi NR

As per NR email, the BBS data only tracks to the point of deployment (when individuals are passed over to a Trust or other body). They do not have a way of identifying when individuals have started a shift.

Based on existing data, I think there are only two potential routes to get a clearer picture of when people are returning to work:

•	The ESR data includes a Covid-19 coding (to allow for the recharging arrangements). This could be used to pull out when individuals have been registered on to ESR by a Trust which would be a step further than BBS data but still wouldn't show when they have actually worked a shift. The data is also likely to be fairly patchy and difficult to draw out across professional groups etc.
•	That we ask DoNs to provide information on the numbers starting in their organisations. Data here is likely to be more accurate but would place a burden on DoNs for an added data collection which may be difficult given current pressures.

Just to not that the NMC figures are UK wide. For England:

Opting into to temp register	9,841
Passed to regions for deployment	8,950
Deployed by regions to front line	2,785
Passed from regions to NHS111	483

•	We are working through a write round process with NMC to pick up those who have opted in to the temporary register but then not advanced to contacting NHSE/I (the difference between the first two figures).
•	Around 15-20% of those opting in to the temporary register withdraw from the process prior to deployment. Regions are working through this but there are a number of reasons behind it – changes in circumstances (individuals self isolating), individuals not wanting to work in "front line" environments, failure of pre-employment checks, individuals not returning contact etc.
